Propaganda in action.

- 1) cyber security experts agree, using electronic devices for elections is risky
- 2) election audit experts like @philipbstark have told @GaSecofState that machine marked ballots can be audited - but the audits don't confirm the results are right.

New today: the @GaSecofState's office is launching this spot as part of a TV+digital campaign to raise awareness of the new ballot-marking device voting system that'll be used statewide starting with the March presidential primary. #gapol

Oddly, while that seems clear to you and me - there are some in the election space who disagree. I cannot fathom the point of an election audit that does not include confirming the outcome. Just had this conversation with @benadida - he's ok with confirming counts, not outcomes

Please don't misrepresent what I said. I said RLAs can only certify counts. I'm not choosing it to be that way, that's just the way it is.

Didn't the conversation begin with you promoting the use of RLAs for all elections, including those with machine marked ballots? That was why I felt comfortable saying you were ok confirming counts, not outcomes. Is that wrong?

RLAs never confirm outcomes on their own. Not for BMDs, not for hand-marked paper ballots. They confirm that tabulation was done correctly.

Tell me more: under what conditions does an RLA confirm outcome with HMPB. Same question for machine marked ballot.
